

In-Home Occupational Therapy Assessment

An In-Home Occupational Therapy Assessment is used when there are concerns about a participant's ability to function safely at home. It focuses on activities of daily living such as self-care, productivity and leisure.

An assessment can determine supports to improve functionality and safety. It can also assist with cost summaries and projections to provide an initial understanding of the potential scope of the participant's injuries and rehabilitation needs.

Recommendations may include:

- Assistive devices or equipment
- Energy conservation strategies
- Home modifications
- Recommendations for further treatment to help increase function

 Assessment may be used for litigation processes and to determine benefit entitlements.*
